'a word you've never heard before', Liam Vose Wilkinson, digital painting the hermit.

the tower.

'it creeps in at the edges', Hayden Wilkinson, digital photography light shifting through form sunsets rays dancing through clouds

creatures growing stretching upwards

towards the light searching for source transient clouds flowing through a bright blue radiant sky permeated by light grounded by darkness

an ephemeral being dances
through the magical woods

a small mammal rests along a perch

they find peace exerting ones space in the world

surviving throughout obstacles joyfully finding little moments to play in samsara mind resting blissfully

in nirvana
with loving awareness

i can still smell the heat. Hayden Wilkinson, film photography

My physical body determines a lot in my life, but it does not determine everything.
My experiences, how I feel, and how I move - all contribute to the magic of consciousness.

I am nonbinary. This is just another way to experience, feel, and move about the world.
It is clear I cannot expect everyone to accept me, but this is not required.

Magically, I keep moving on - riding out each new day with love in my heart.
